How to obtain a working Windows license with a broken one-year old MacBook Pro? I bought a laptop a year and a half ago that had a cracked screen. While the laptop has worked fine for me, the repair bill has exceeded the worth of the machine. I recently bought a newer MacBook Pro to replace it, and it appears that Apple's warranty does not cover repairing the MacBook Pro. The extended warranty doesn't cover me either. I've been looking into Microsoft's extended warranty, but it seems the only people who are getting a qualified Microsoft license are those who have bought a Windows license on a recent PC. In my case, the Macbook was purchased from an electronics shop, and if I bought it from an Apple Store, I believe that I would be able to get a qualified license. Is this true? If I need to use Windows in order to contact Apple support to get a license, is there a way to obtain a Windows license without spending a lot of money? My budget will not allow me to spend more than about $100 on a Windows license. A: There is a Microsoft Store at the Mall near Baltimore, and they have a section on their website dedicated to Apple Product Support Issues. I had a similar problem (new Mac) and called the hotline (1-800-367-6660). They were able to move me to a specialist (Apple Cert., Cert. Admin., etc.) that is on staff. The specialist had direct phone and email access to Apple. The only way to do this was by a system as Apple certified. Hope this helps! [Levels of total cholesterol, LDL-cholesterol, HDL-cholesterol, and triglycerides in patients with diabetes mellitus]. The levels of total cholesterol (TC), LDL-cholesterol (LDL-C), HDL-cholesterol (HDL-C) and triglycerides (TG) were measured in 110 patients (76 males and 34 females) suffering from diabetes mellitus. Forty-five patients had type I (noninsulin-dependent diabetes mellitus), 25 patients had type II (insulin-dependent diabetes mellitus), and 30 patients had secondary diabetes. The control group
